

South Texas College of Law Houston named “Best of the Decade” in Moot Court competitions.

#1

South Texas College of Law Houston is one of only three schools nationwide consistently ranked in the top 10 for trial advocacy by U.S. News & World Report. The law school has won 133 national advocacy championships. No other law school in the United States has won half as many.

133

South Texas College of Law Houston has won the American Bar Association National Appellate Advocacy Championship 15 times, more than any other law school in the country.

15

South Texas College of Law Houston has won five first-place Best Brief awards in the American Society of Legal Writers’ Scribes competition — the most prestigious legal writing competition in the nation. No other law school has claimed this honor more than once.

5

In the past five years, students from South Texas College of Law Houston’s Frank Evans Center for Conflict Resolution have won 19 first-place national and international alternative dispute resolution competitions. The law school is ranked as a “Top Law School for ADR” by preLaw Magazine.

19

Each year, through the Randall O. Sorrels Legal Clinics, students provide more than 35,000 hours of pro bono legal services to underserved Houston residents, valued at nearly $1.8 million.
